CPTED: The Cost and Benefits to Your Communities and Agencies

8:00 AM - 9:30 AM

Session No:

4004

Type:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

W207

Presenter(s):

Kevlon Kirkpatrick

Orlando Police Department - Corporal

Audra Rigby

Orlando Police Department - Planner III

Description:

According to a report released by the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) in 2017, researchers estimated varying annual costs of crime to between $690 billion and $3.41 trillion, adjusted to 2016 dollars. In this session, two seasoned crime reduction experts, Kevlon Kirkpatrick and Audra Rigby, will share internationally recognized strategies to reduce the opportunity for crime in your communities. Attendees will learn cost benefits of training staff as Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED) Practitioners and how CPTED strategies can improve safety to first responders, can lead to a reduction in the fear and incidence of crime and improve liability exposure.

Improve Employee Accountability by Building Employee Trust

8:00 AM - 9:30 AM

Session No:

2054

Type:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

W304EF

Presenter(s):

Ronald Glidden

Lee Police Department - Chief of Police (Ret.)

Description:

A Rules-based culture too often focuses only on minimal employee compliance and discipline. Today's value-based cultures focus more on employee commitment and performance. This presentation takes both of these mindsets into consideration as it provides attendees with practical trust-building steps to help them improve employee commitment, accountability and performance. Using engagement, clear expectations, and continual feedback to eliminate communication failures, this trust-building strategy will begin to move employees towards a value-based mindset. Attendees will be given the tools they need to make deposits in their "trust account" to help them get the accountability from employees that they desire and the public demands.

Secondary Presenter(s):

Alexandra Comolli

FBI - Staff Operations Specialist, Criminal Investigative Division

Description:

This block of instruction will be presented by the FBI CID's Hi-Tech Organized Crime Unit. It will provide an introduction to the Darknet and TOR - software originally known as The Onion Router, because of its layers and layers of encryption. TOR software ensures encryption by routing traffic through a network of secure relays that anonymizes the end user of the TOR network. DarkNet refers to a section of peer-to-peer networks on the internet. The DarkNet is composed of people and sites using software (such as TOR) to obfuscate their identities and locations.

The presentation will define a Darknet criminal enterprise; provide a Darknet demo; describe the state of the Darknet community; provide an introduction to cryptocurrencies and exp

Presenter(s):

Dr. Laura King

McHenry County State's Attorney's Office - Chief Investigator

Description:

This session offers an overview of how powerful leadership strategies from the business world can be applied to the home environment to help create a healthy, happy and highly functioning family unit. As executives, we often focus our structured leadership efforts at the office. This presentation will explore how taking these same principles and applying them at home can create incredible results. The concepts presented will unite in a way that can help families create an engaged, supportive and highly functioning team. Even the strongest families will enjoy this creative way to explore how to get the most out of their internal operations. It is time to invest in what is most important. It is time to take your family to the next level.

The Police Foundation - Project Assistant

Description:

School shootings generate significant media attention, but the averted school attacks provide successful practices and lessons for law enforcement. The goal of the COPS Office and NIJ-funded Police Foundation's Averted School Violence (ASV) initiative is to help prevent further death and injury from violent attacks in schools nationwide, by recognizing and studying the attacks that are averted and to share the lessons learned with those involved in school safety. These averted attacks contain valuable information that if identified and implemented early in schools, can prevent future violence.

Description:

Police leaders face exceptional challenges in managing today's turbulent personnel recruitment environment. These challenges are amplified due to the lack of systematic research that examines what potential applicants understand about police careers. This five-university survey of undergraduate criminal justice majors provides evidence about potential applicants' impressions of recruitment, selection, initial training, and patrol careers. These data sharpen our understanding of applicants' perspectives, informing police leadership about marketing and branding strategies, recruitment and selection efforts, and the nature of the current applicant pool. Discussion will include the implications of survey results on agency recruitment practices.

USDOJ Community Relations Service - Deputy Director

Charles Phillips

Community Relations Service--USDOJ - Conciliation Specialist

Dan Spizarny

Erie, Pennsylvania, Police Department - Chief of Police

Description:

Learn how the Community Relations Service (CRS) supports law enforcement and communities working to address conflicts and tensions arising from differences of race, color, national origin, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, religion, and disability. This year saw community conflicts and tensions stemming from hate crimes and bias incidents, bullying in schools, protests and counter-protests, and the race-based tensions that communities have faced for many years. CRS supports local efforts in all of these areas and more! This session will highlight CRS's new program, Strengthening Police-Community Partnerships (SPCP), a day-long session with where local law enforcement and community leaders identify issues impacting community trust and historical barriers that hinder police-community partnerships. With a focus on collaborative problem-solving and tangible solutions, the outcome of the day is an action plan implemented with the help of a Council formed as part of the program.

Description:

The opioid crisis has grown to one of the largest issues that American law enforcement face. Overdoses have spiked dramatically over the past five years, with more than 11.5 million Americans abusing opioids in 2017 and more than 115 overdose deaths every day. As drugs-of-choice have diversified to include fentanyl and other synthetics, the crisis has become even more complex, demanding an equally complex and multifaceted criminal justice response. In this panel, Dr. Frances Scott, a physical scientist with NIJ, will present the scope and scale of the opioid crisis facing American law enforcement, as well as an overview of NIJ's response and relevant research. Chief Brandon del Pozo, of Burlington, VT, will offer a police executive's perspective on managing the response and balancing a public health and criminal justice approach. Chief Richard Biehl, of the Dayton, OH Police Department, will give an overview of Dayton's use of data collaboration and community and public health partnerships in their opioid response, and speak to the importance of including individuals in long-term recovery within a law enforcement response. Dr. Mallory O'Brien, of the Milwaukee Homicide Review Commission, will describe how Milwaukee has informed law enforcement response through a learning-from-error approach to opioid fatalities.

Current research demonstrates a connection between insufficient & poor quality sleep, and poor health outcomes. The police profession is at risk of these poor health outcomes given the extreme levels of fatigue they routinely experience. Interventions targeted for police officers are believed to be an effective health & wellness strategy. The RCMP identified a potential solution and pioneered an innovative approach. This fatigue mgt training study, with pre-post measurements is the first of its kind, showing promise for improving member sleep, health & wellness. Findings suggest that a 4hr training program results in increased satisfaction with sleep, sleep quality, along with mental & physical health & wellness benefits for police officers

Northwestern Medical Group - Medical Director, Health Promotion and Corporate Services

Description:

This session will show participants the importance of medications when evaluating the fitness-for-duty of law enforcement officers. Specific medications can indicate likely conditions. Other medications have unique side effect profiles that may influence the behavior of officers. The influence of medications on law enforcement officers will be reviewed, with a special emphasis on depression, posttraumatic stress disorder, substance abuse, sleep and wakefulness aids. Emergent issues, such as the treatment of depression and chronic pain with ketamine, medical marijuana (and FDA-approved cannabinoids), the opioid crisis, and the treatment of shift work disorder, will be addressed. An agency medication disclosure policy will be reviewed.

Silent Witness: A Discussion of Video Evidence Including Why You Might NOT Have the Best Evidence

10:00 AM - 11:30 AM

Session No:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

Presenter(s):

Gerald Lanna MR.

Ontario Provincial Police - Special Constable

Juan Ruano

Law Enforcement & Emergency Services Video Association - President

Description:

Often in the policing world, video evidence is described as a "Silent Witness". Video can be powerful evidence, depicting both subjects and victims and providing a testimonial as to time and events surrounding a crime. However, it is believed by too many that video is easily recovered, understood, and quickly analyzed. Therein lies the foundation for mistakes and missed opportunities.

This presentation will focus on these critical issues, including many of the scientific principles involved with forensic video analysis and legal matters impacting video evidence. Case studies will include large scale events (including a review of video evidence in the Boston Marathon Bombing investigations) and officer involved shootings.

The Top Ten Reasons to Start a Police Homeless Outreach Team (and How)

10:00 AM - 11:30 AM

Session No:

2345

Type:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

Presenter(s):

Daniel McDonald, MPA

Tampa Police Department - Homeless Liaison Officer

Description:

Un-arresting away homelessness in your community through the development of a homeless outreach team is one of the hottest trends in policing today. If your agency continues to struggle with more questions than answers, consider the top-ten reasons why you should start a homeless outreach team (and how)?

Homelessness is expensive. Each chronically homeless person on the streets of your community consumes up to $30,000 annually in public resources (such as jail stays and emergency room visits).

By breaking the "homeless circle of life" with an effective homeless outreach team, your agency can now offer strategy, solutions and savings.

DOJ/Public Safety Officers' Benefit Program - Director, PSOB

Description:

Enacted in 1976, the Public Safety Officers' Benefits (PSOB) Program provides vital death and education benefits to survivors of fallen law enforcement officers, firefighters, and other first responders, and disability benefits to officers catastrophically injured in the line of duty. Far too often public safety agencies are unaware of this federal program, and find themselves trying to understand its filing requirements while leading their departments through unprecedented crisis. Attend this session to be prepared, and to better prevent, as one Chief recently shared "drinking from a fire hose" should tragedy strike.

Ivonne Roman

Newark, New Jersey, Criminal Investigations Bureau - Captain

Description:

NIJ strongly believes that law enforcement can and should be empowered to address their own high-priority research questions in-house. Through the NIJ Law Enforcement Advancing Data and Science (LEADS) program, NIJ supports the professional development of research-minded law enforcement who are deeply committed to ensuring policies and practices reflect the current state of scientific knowledge and to producing novel research to support their agency's operations and advance understanding of what works and what matters in their jurisdiction. Featuring research and exploratory projects from mid-career officers from across the country, this panel will demonstrate the potential impact of law enforcement officers being given the support they need to conduct research (often in addition to their full-time duties) and improve policies and practices. Captain Ken Clary of the Iowa State Patrol will discuss his work applying the principles of hotspot policing to reduce rural DUIs. Sergeant Jeremiah Johnson of the Darien, CT Police Department will discuss randomized control trials he conducted to explore various night patrol cruiser lighting schemes. Sergeant Nicole Powell of the New Orleans Police Department will discuss her work establishing in-house research committees to support scientific exploration. Captain Ivonne Roman will discuss her work to improve retention of female recruits in the Newark, NJ Police Division.

Description:

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's National Violent Death Reporting System (NVDRS) is the most comprehensive violence-related mortality surveillance system in existence. The system collects information on homicides, suicides, deaths of undetermined intent, deaths due to legal intervention, and unintentional firearm injury deaths. The system allows for capture of multiple manners of death within one incident (e.g., homicide followed by suicide).

This session will describe how NVDRS collects data on violent deaths in the U.S. and how the system can be of mutual benefit to public health and law enforcement partners. Updates on how VDRS states have worked with law enforcement to advance violence prevention will be discussed.

Bridging the Gap between Law Enforcement and Policing Communication

Presenter(s):

Darron Esan

Orlando Police Department - Lieutenant

Description:

This workshop is a presentation which examines the current Law Enforcement Communication style which is taught today. The workshop will discuss some issues associated with this communication style to include a disconnect with many citizens and distrust of police due to the direct and controlling style of communicating which is currently being taught to police officers around the United States.

In contrast, a Policing style of communication encourages officers to work with citizens towards a resolution to a problem. Policing style communicators are able to recognize that not every police contact requires a "direct order or command."

This workshop was designed as a result of a Capstone paper completed during studies that Lt. Darron Esan completed while attending the University of Wisconsin at Platteville.

Topics of discussion within the workshop will be:

- Law Enforcement Communication vs. Policing Communication
- The President's Task Force on 21st Century Policing
- Examining Current State Curricula
- Different Communication Skills for both Law Enforcement/Policing

Description:

Effective partnerships between law enforcement and the communities they serve are a key component in effectively identifying and assisting victims of human trafficking and investigating and prosecuting traffickers. Agencies that focus on the three principles of community policing – partnerships, problem solving, and organizational change - have seen success in building trust and strengthening relationships between law enforcement and the communities they serve; including populations that may be particularly vulnerable to trafficking. This session will focus on practices in community policing approaches to human trafficking with the goal to explore how the law enforcement response to human trafficking might be strengthened in the field.

Our recruiting efforts of the past aren't working anymore. As we look to diversify our workforces, it's time we embrace technology, and new strategies, to find qualified men and women looking to keep our communities safe. Regardless of your agency size, this session will give you tools and ideas that are working from four agency leaders looking to replace more than 300 positions (20% of their workforce) created by retirements.

The Six Critical Psychological Factors to Consider in Determining When to Do an Officer-involved Shooting Interview

12:30 PM - 1:50 PM

Force Science Institute - Executive Director

Description:

When to interview an officer after an OIS or critical incident has been influenced by many legal, social and psychological factors. IACP's current policy is to recommend a delay of 48 to 72 hours. Even within IACP there is considerable conflict between advocates for an immediate interview versus those advocating for a delay.

The primary concern is how to obtain the most accurate recall while avoiding unnecessary contamination and considering the well-being of the officer. The goal of this presentation is to assist the attendees in understanding the 6 psychological factors and related legal implications that can influence an officer's complete and accurate recall and the research that supports the influence of those factors.

Keeping Protests Peaceful: What Works and What Matters to Prevent and Respond to Civil Disturbances - Presented by the U.S. National Institute of Justice

Dr. Bernd Bürger

Special Civil Disturbance Evidence and Arrest Unit (Unterstützungskommando Dachau, Bavaria, Germany) - Lieutenant Colonel (Polizeioberrat)

Description:

Law enforcement agencies and officers are committed to safeguarding the American public's right to free assembly and free expression protected under the First Amendment. They also must protect themselves and members of the public if a legitimate demonstration or protest deteriorates to violence and mayhem. Recent protests, demonstrations, and other events have made civil disturbance an issue heavy in the minds of law enforcement across the country, and some have reported feeling underprepared, ill-equipped, and inadequately trained for these events. This panel features law enforcement leaders in civil disturbance response, and considers what science shows works and matters to keep protests peaceful. Captain Alan Hanson, of the Fairfax County Police Department, will discuss the importance of training, equipment, and tactics in responding to civil disturbances, as well as recent experiences and lessons learned from events in the National Capital Region. Acting Captain Ryan Lee, of the Portland Police Bureau, will discuss how his agency has integrated civil disturbance response into its operations, including the proactive use of public affairs and coordination with other city leaders, while commanding operations in a region with an active protest culture. Captain Scott Oldham, of the Bloomington Police Department, will discuss successes using policing strategies designed to avoid escalating public demonstrations in a smaller city with a large, politically active college campus. Finally, Dr. Tamara Madensen, Associate Professor of Criminal Justice at the University of Nevada Las Vegas and Director of the Crowd Management Research Council, will provide an overview of the research on crowd violence and explore how science supports police interventions during civil disorder situations.

Ethical Policing is Courageous: How Peer Intervention Will Save Officer Lives and Careers

2:00 PM - 3:00 PM

Session No:

2515

Type:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

W307

Presenter(s):

Paul Noel

New Orleans Police Department - Deputy Superintendent

Secondary Presenter(s):

Daniel Murphy

New Orleans Police Department - Deputy Superintendent, Compliance Bureau

Description:

Ethical Policing is Courageous (EPIC) is an innovative peer intervention program to prevent mistakes and misconduct by police officers. It teaches officers how to recognize when other officers are in danger of making mistakes or committing acts of misconduct that could cause harm to civilians and to an officer's career and safety. It trains officers about the psychological inhibitors to peer intervention and how to overcome those inhibitors. A year into EPIC, the NOPD is hosting a first of its kind Peer Intervention Executive Leadership Conference in April 2018. The NOPD's EPIC Program continues to evolve and we are receiving interest from across the country. This presentation will cover the next steps in the development of our program.

Description:

There has been a great deal of concern and news pertaining to officer exposure and safety, especially with regard to synthetic opioids such as fentanyl and its analogues. There have been case reports of officer exposure and subsequent treatment, even during a routine vehicle stop. Some of the information on safety is valid while other information is not which has created chaos and confusion. This presentation will review the evidence surrounding safe police procedures for handling drug evidence as well as other considerations such as drug lab and chemical suicide.

Description:

DHS Science and Technology (S&T) seeks to equip the law enforcement with cutting-edge technologies to make them better protected, connected, and aware of evolving threats. S&T and a host of public and private partners are working to change the conversation on how tech solutions can better integrate into operations and provide relevant, cost-effective and life-saving capabilities. Why this matters? In today's environment, mobile devices and applications are critical for mission accomplishment. However, as the use of mobility rises, who ensures emergency communications are secure and private? Learn why it is important to consider field requirements at the outset of innovation cycles and why agencies need more options for the front lines.

Description:

Law enforcement officers and other first responders throughout America have implemented a variety of law enforcement diversion models in response to the opioid epidemic. Three examples of opioid-related law enforcement diversion programs will be examined, including a rapid response intervention program for children who witness a parent or loved one suffer an overdose. This session will also provide a framework for assessing the various models of law enforcement diversion and the goals of each type of diversion model. A matrix will be presented that allows communities to evaluate which model of law enforcement diversion programming may be most appropriate for their community based on their needs.

Oftentimes we're a department of one, a civilian learning the law enforcement ropes or dealing with the most tragic and overwhelming event an agency can ever face. That's why it's important to have solid PIO relationships BEFORE an incident strikes so that when it does happen-and we know it will-you have partnerships already established from which you can call for help. These three PIOs will show you how to create such relationships and how beneficial they have been with understanding social media, managing a line of duty death and dealing with non-stop local and national media interest

Description:

We examined MMPI-2-RF externalizing scale (ES) scores and personal history information (biodata) in 1,226 police officer candidates to assess for evidence of overcontrol. We also examined associations between ES scores and biodata and performance measures in a subset of psychologically qualified and hired officers. We hypothesized and found that overcontrolled behavior, as reflected in low ES scores, is associated with performance problems during training. A history of overcontrolled behavior likely leaves recruits ill-equipped to meet the stressful demands of law enforcement work. We also found that ES scores and biodata augment one another in the prediction of poor performance outcomes associated with overcontrolled behavior.

"Tone at the top" is a multi-media, interactive, workshop that provides current examples of public safety leaders navigating adversarial public incidents. There is a cause and effect in leadership just as there is a cause and effect in medicine or education. As important as it is to apply deliberate leadership actions, you have a requirement to communicate your actions effectively and build in metrics to ensure message delivery and compliance. This is of paramount importance for High Reliability Organizations (HROs), like law enforcement agencies, where first pass success or the need to "get it right the first time" is critical.

The NIBIN network is a critical crime fighting tool because it stores the ballistics of all bullet cartages that have been entered to the system and links bullets that have been discharged by the same gun.

NIBIN is also essential for the functioning of any Crime Gun Intelligence Center (CGIC). CGICs are considered an interagency collaboration focused on the immediate collection, management, and analysis of crime gun evidence, such as shell casings, in real time, in an effort to identify shooters, disrupt criminal activity, and prevent future violence. General Stanley McChrystal, a retired Army general and former Commander of U.S. and International Forces in Afghanistan, will share lessons based on leading and innovating one of the world's largest organizations. Modern warfare and business demand the same no-nonsense leadership, similar to the law enforcement profession, that drives change and implements it across organizations. He will reveal the power of culture, communication, and relationships, through stories, experiences, and principles.

McChrystal will address key leadership principles such as transparency and inclusion, leveraging the power of teams through relationships, leading by influence, relentless mission focus, and sharing a clear vision with everyone who must execute against it. The audience will find commonalities in these principles and how they relate to the law enforcement profession and the teams they lead.

Description:

Historically, the social issue of human trafficking has often been labeled a "vice crime," a phrase typically used in law enforcement for illegal activities that have no victim or complaining party, such as prostitution, illegal drugs, and gambling. Accordingly, many victims of human trafficking, in particular sex trafficking, are forced or coerced into prostitution and have been treated as a social illness: members of a society who are not adequately socialized to adopt the society's norms and values, rather than being treated as victims of exploitation and abuse. Faced with this ever-growing challenge of sexual exploitation in many communities, there are two ways to respond: 1) deny that injustice can occur because these are somewhat voluntary transactions, or 2) toughen up the conditions for free agreement so that agreements made in ignorance, or in conditions of necessity, will not count as genuinely voluntary. Accordingly, to address the profound challenges of human trafficking, the moral response to human trafficking exploitation must be the second. Governments and communities moved by a humanitarian concern to minimize human suffering, rescue the victims, and seek punishment for those responsible for human trafficking, must address this social justice issue across many sectors of the community and at all levels of the criminal justice system, thus creating spaces to encourage engagement in public life. Thus, creating opportunities for many citizens and providers outside of government to help fight human trafficking.

After hosting and attending regional human trafficking workshops and seminars, and intrigued by an opportunity to introduce a system-wide approach to human trafficking in central Florida, 19 regional experts and authors collaborated to publish a book that introduces a holistic, system-wide approach that creates unique spaces in the fight against human trafficking. These spaces include the government services of law enforcement, corrections, prosecution and the judiciary, as well as social and health care services, NGO's, task forces involving citizens, and education and research institutions. In this book, a blend of government and non-government resources collaborate in the fight against human trafficking through a practical, informed and analyzed social science lens.

The book, a best practice that makes a strong contribution to the literature in the field because of its applied approach, highlights a new paradigm, an authentic model of involvement and engagement in the fight against human trafficking:

The next generation of Internet of Things devices and applications will not only increase the amount of data but will have related applications with built-in analytics to support critical decision-making needs. Come talk with other police leaders who are implementing their own solutions and learn how they have come to embrace the volume of data, review the data, ask the right questions of the data, and identify what they need to know and when from the data analytics.

Description:

After a series of publicized officer events in Indianapolis and around the country that served to negatively reflect on law enforcement and hindered relationships with the community, The Indianapolis Metropolitan Police Department (IMPD) embarked upon a ground-breaking officer wellness and resiliency program. In 2010 IMPD created the Office of Professional Development and Wellness (OPDW) to combat employee crisis using innovative strategies and best practices. The problem-solving program identified agency and community stakeholders and used education and crisis support resources for early intervention rather than waiting for more crisis to occur. The goal of the program is to create and maintain healthy habits throughout officers careers.

Description:

In today's society, the roles and responsibilities of law enforcement are broader than ever, with increased scrutiny & challenges leading to greater cumulative stress and systemic issues which impact officers, their spouses and the department itself, creating challenges to morale and performance. The toll on law enforcement marriage is tremendous, often generating a downward spiral/critical decline culminating in dysfunctional relationships, family challenges and ultimately, divorce. Nevertheless, it is possible to prevent these issues and resuscitate a "flat line" marriage through an understanding of the impact of the law enforcement career on the marriage relationship, equipping officers with the relational tools to help promote a strong marriage, increasing resilience and improved morale.

Law enforcement officers investigating and working to prevent crimes against children face epic challenges. The explosion of social media and apps has created new means for predators to contact and develop exploitative relationships with children. Offenders amass vast collections of images, creating daunting processing and analysis demands. Apps let offenders send messages with photos and videos that are not captured in call detail records or allow users to hide images and have messages self-destruct. Our presentation discusses Project VIC, which aides LE efforts in 40+ nations by developing innovative technologies to identify the most urgent cases and locate victims and presents investigative best practices of 3 ICAC task forces.

Social Media from Scratch: Digital Start-ups for Smaller Departments

8:00 AM - 9:30 AM

Session No:

2572

Type:

Educational SessionLocation:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

W202

Presenter(s):

Kevin Sylvester

Ossining, New York Police Department - Chief of Police

Description:

Social media has helped many police departments engage their resident in ways that create trust, improve service, and enhance efficiency. Still, many smaller departments are unwilling or unable to implement digital strategies citing issues such as staffing shortages, budget restrictions, time constraints, and fear of civil liability. This presentation will provide attendees with an introduction to social media for law enforcement with a focus on first steps for smaller departments and those with limited resources. We will discuss the reasons so many are reluctant to go digital and strategies for moving beyond the roadblocks.

Battered Women's Justice Project - TA Provider/Probation Project

Description:

Analysis by the Alliance for Hope of officers killed in the United States in 2017 by felonious assault showed they had one common denominator. A large portion were killed by suspects who had previously committed non fatal strangulation of their domestic partners. Strangulation is the ultimate demonstration of power and control in domestic abuse. Demonstrating that life and death can be held in the hands of the perpetrator at a sexual distance marks the crossing of a very dangerous barrier. The San Diego District Attorney's Office and San Diego Police have been in the forefront of research and training related to non fatal strangulation. Relevant anatomy and physiology will be discussed regarding why these cases need to be vigorously addressed by a multi-disciplinary team approach,

Learning Objectives:

1. The student will be able to discuss the frequent lack of external physical findings in survivors of non fatal strangulation.
2. The student will be able to identify key elements in the pathophysiology of non fatal strangulation that may limit the victim's recall of the event.
3. The student will be able to discuss the strategies for successful prosecution of these difficult cases.

Description:

More women are leading police and law enforcement organizations across the country than any period in our history. And although there is no empirical data that suggest women are improving community relations, police tactics or positively impacting the overall culture of law enforcement, there is significant anecdotal evidence women leaders are in fact doing just that and redefining leadership unlike ever before.

An all-female chiefs' panel from federal, state and local agencies will share whether there are any discernible patterns in their career paths to top executive leadership positions. They will also share their own unique set of skills and proactive strategies, as it relates to leading authentically, effectively navigating politics, restoring community trust, reducing corruption and implementing sustainable organizational change. Q & A will follow.

To manage the risk of rogue drones, law enforcement personnel must know the different requirements between commercial and recreational operations to navigate investigations. Federal Aviation Administration guidance on Unmanned Aircraft encounters skirts the edge of constitutional policing. Adding to the danger posed by careless or reckless operation of a small unmanned aircraft (sUAS) to the National Airspace and the non-participating public, criminal factions (including terrorists) are developing methods to exploit drone use for nefarious purposes. This session will address new technology to counter it.

Description:

Over the last several years police departments around the country have employed the use of body camera technology. While helpful they also have their own set of limitations regardless of the expense. Their primary function is to accurately record what happened. However, what happens when the recording and the police officer's story don't match and under high stress situations they probably won't because the human brain and memory are fallible. Under high stress situations all human beings have the potential to see, hear, feel, or experience things that did not actually happen. In addition visual perception distorts and even biases, beliefs, experiences, and expectations all influence one's ability to accurately remember.

Combating Transnational Crime and Terrorism in Local Communities: INTERPOL Washington

10:00 AM - 11:30 AM

Presenter(s):

INTERPOL Washington - U.S. National Central Bureau - Senior Advisor to the Director

Description:

Transnational crime and terrorism pose a direct and growing threat to officer safety, public safety, and our national security. Recent events throughout the United States have clearly demonstrated that criminal and terrorist actors with an international nexus are present - physically as well as virtually - in communities of all sizes. In many instances, their crimes are enabled by the same advances in technology that support legitimate communications and commerce, allowing them to enter our communities undetected; mask illicit financial transactions; exploit children and other vulnerable populations, and recruit and radicalize disaffected elements into committing acts of extreme violence against innocent civilians and law enforcement.

Description:

In the past, some police agencies have been indifferent to civil rights. Others permitted the physical assault or murder of citizens of a different race or ethnic group. None of these actions occurred in a vacuum, but rather reflected the popular will of its citizens and in some cases the governing laws of that jurisdiction.

The institutional memory of those unjust acts has begun to fade and is sometimes even unknown to today's new recruits. But attitudes and stories are passed down to future generations. That oral history has resulted in a pattern of distrust between the police and some of the communities they serve. These past civil rights injustices must be acknowledged by the current law enforcement.

Hear from law enforcement and civil rights experts about how acknowledging the past can help heal community and how to use the foundation of history to begin building trust.

Description:

Since 2015, SAKI has been making a difference by improving the response to sexual assault by identifying and apprehending violent offenders and by addressing the problem of unsubmitted sexual assault kits. The impact of SAKI is being felt at the community level both in terms of getting dangerous offenders off the street and empowering victims to come forward. As many communities experience high levels of violent crime, police departments have found that efforts to improve their response to sexual assaults has also aided in other crime reduction initiatives.

This panel will discuss innovative ways to address violent crimes and research from Kansas Bureau of Investigations on offenders' propensity to commit additional acts of sexual violence; to encourage law enforcement leaders and key stakeholders to support addressing sexual assault cases to improve public safety.

The Chief's repeated quote, "When I have the facts, you will have the facts" is well known public doctrine in a county of nearly 1 million residents. The Chief and his Director of Media Relations will discuss 3 critical incidents: A fatal police involved shooting, a near fatal domestic arson, and the murders of three young children. Public trust hinges on knowing the information will come. Through its use of social media, the department is able to extend its reach far beyond media cameras, so residents hear first-hand from the Chief...and fast.

Drivers must be aware of the effects prescription and over the counter drugs can have on driving. Drivers need to pay close attention to the labels on both prescription and OTC medications.

Ron Nichols

Nichols Forensic Science Consulting - President

Description:

48 hours is not just a television show – it is the timeframe investigators can and should expect routine forensic ballistic analyses. With forensic backlogs that have extended into months if not years, agencies have re-examined their capabilities especially with respect to forensic ballistic analyses. What these agencies have discovered is that they can adjust existing policies and personnel to better leverage NIBIN, enabling them to have actionable intelligence within 48 hours or less. This presentation will provide attendees with guidance on how to evaluate the forensic services they are receiving so that they will be in a better-informed position to respond to concerns that forensic laboratories may pose with respect to making changes. It will also provide attendees with strategies for leveraging NIBIN, along with existing personnel and policies, making routine forensic ballistic analyses within 48 hours a reality.

Officer Safety: Assessing Threats of Domestic Violence Perpetrators

11:30 AM - 12:00 PM

Session No:

4080

Type:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

The Hub - Booth #1539

Presenter(s):

Douglas Burig

Pennsylvania State Police - Major

Michael Rizzo

IACP - Program Manager, Programs

Description:

Domestic violence calls are inherently challenging for responding officers and the relationship between perpetrators of domestic violence and officers killed in the line of duty is indisputable. In 2017, twelve officers were killed, and nine thus far in 2018, responding to domestic violence calls. Facilitators will highlight the challenges officers face when responding to domestic violence calls, discuss recent cases in Pennsylvania, and present a segment of a training video developed by the IACP, The Crime of Domestic Violence, that addresses domestic violence offender realities and threats to officers.

How Video Analytics is Changing the Game in Public Safety and Law Enforcement - Presented by IBM

12:00 PM - 12:45 PM

Type:

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

Presenter(s):

Bill Josko

IBM - Business Unit Executive, Global Intelligent Video Analytics (IVA) Sales, Watson Media and Weather

Description:

Between surveillance cameras, smartphone cameras, drones and body cameras worn by law enforcement officers, the amount of available video content has exploded. But this proliferation of video data is only valuable if it can be transformed into usable insight in a fast and efficient manner.

Cities, local governments, law enforcement officials and private enterprises may have more cameras than ever, but even the most diligent security officers have a limited ability to monitor everything that happens on a single screen, let alone several video feeds at once.

IBM's Intelligent Video Analytics (IVA) solution uses sophisticated machine-learning algorithms for both real-time surveillance and post-event forensic analysis. This gives security and operational teams, and public safety organizations the ability to create alerts for specific activity and easily find relevant images and critical information, across multiple video files from multiple camera types.

Join leaders from the IVA team to learn how local government, law enforcement and private enterprises are transforming their safety and operations from reactive to proactive by leveraging machine-learning to flag events and activity – ultimately creating safer, more secure public and private environments. From flagging trespassers in restricted areas, to recognizing traffic patterns and anomalous behavior, the IVA platform is ushering in a new level of protection – and helping security personnel while doing it.

Description:

Based on data collected from the Assessing Police Use of Force Policy and Outcomes project, one of the largest and most comprehensive studies on police use of force to date, this presentation details the varying types of use of force policies in operation throughout the U.S. and shows the extent to which different types of policies provide more beneficial (and detrimental) outcomes to police practitioners in relation to force usage, officer and suspect injuries, citizen complaints, and line-level officer views of policy guidance. A snapshot of key findings will provide police executives and trainers with valuable evidenced-based data on the strengths and drawbacks of varying types of use of force policies.

Description:

The manner in which large crowds and protests are managed greatly impact whether the event will go peacefully or veer into violent civil disorder. Unfortunately, specialized crowd management and control development for law enforcement commanders in the U.S. is often overlooked. Agencies often find themselves placing commanders with little if any specialized training or experience in charge of these events with less than ideal outcomes.

This presentation intends to discuss international command and control best practices and the work being done to establish command level courses at the Center for Domestic Preparedness. The utilization of Police Liaison Teams, evidence gathering teams and the education of elected officials will be discussed.

Description:

The Colombian National Police is an institution with a workforce of over 180,000 men and women, whose primary responsibility is to address the security needs of all Colombians and to focus on the promotion of social harmony, needs a strong leadership model in order to successfully meet its objectives. This is why leaders within the police have become the 'facilitators', 'champions' and 'enforcers' of the organisation's constitutional mission through change management (including to the culture of the institution), using their influence to address any inequality. This doesn't just allow for improved assimilation in the changing dynamics of new environments, but also ensures more general and sustainable evolution.

Controversial social issues are not an emerging topic in social media for law enforcement – they are already here. From diversity in departments, to homelessness issues, to the opioid epidemic and more, law enforcement agencies aren't just the first to respond to these issues – they are now having to tackle the education and outreach efforts as well. In a field with ever-expanding assumptions of just what the role of law enforcement is in our community, how do we educate and tackle those issues head-on? Learn how to transparently and effectively share information on tough topics by bringing your residents into the fold and learn how to stave off criticism and confusion through different social media platforms.

Providing comprehensive curriculum is time intensive and costly. Many have little to no available resources to support training and devoting personnel. This presentation highlights how one region struggled to address a need for increased training and how they overcame challenges to realize their goal. By partnering, agencies successfully increased the availability of CIT training setting a standard of excellence in police response to mental health. Presenters will discuss challenges faced along the way, overcoming barriers and strategies that proved critical to successful implementation.

Description:

Rapid DNA (R-DNA) instruments have been available for several years. In August 2017, the Rapid DNA Act of 2017 authorized the FBI issue standards and procedure for the use of Rapid DNA instruments outside of an accredited laboratory for CODIS enrollment and searching. The Rapid DNA instruments were developed for the "hands free" typing of reference samples for submission to CODIS. Results are produced in approximately 90 minutes with minimal operator intervention. Following the U.S. Supreme Court decision (Maryland vs King) upholding the constitutionality of arrestee DNA collection, the FBI focused its Rapid DNA Program toward direct integration of the booking station with CODIS and the National DNA Database.

Description:

Following the Supreme Court's decision in Riley that searching the contents of smartphone is a Fourth Amendment search, trial courts will likely require suppression of evidence found on cell phones unless officers have a search warrant or have an exception to the warrant requirement. Courts are increasingly skeptical of allowing exceptions to the warrant requirement, so mastery of affidavit writing is a must for any officer that plans to exploit evidence from electronic devices that have a high degree of privacy. This hands-on, interactive presentation from the Federal Law Enforcement Training Centers will teach you how to quickly and effectively draft affidavits, edit for clarity, and electronically submit affidavits to magistrate judges.

Marijuana-Impaired Driving Prevention: Using Drug Recognition Experts to Educate the Community

IACP - Project Manager

Description:

Currently nine states allow for marijuana use recreationally. Thirty-five allow for some application of medicinal purposes, while six still prohibit it completely. Colorado, one of the first states to legalize marijuana in any capacity, has seen a 117% increase of marijuana-impaired fatalities during just the time it was allowed for medicinal purposes. A survey of over 2,000 U.S. adults revealed that more Americans consider using social media (99%) and texting (98%) on a cell phone to be dangerous while driving than driving under the influence of marijuana (91%). While the majority of Americans (91%) believe driving under the influence of marijuana is dangerous and a similar percentage (87%) say those who do so are a hazard to others on the road, just two in five (40%) believe it is contributing to more motor vehicle crashes. Only 31% of parents have discussed the dangers of driving under the influence of marijuana with their child, which pales in comparison to parents who have discussed: Wearing a seatbelt all/most of the time (67%), Texting while driving (60%), and Speeding while driving (54%). In a recent survey, One-third of all respondents (33.4%) agreed or strongly agreed with the statement "I can safely drive under the influence of marijuana," whereas only 8.3% agreed or strongly agreed they could safely drive under the influence of alcohol (data not shown). More than one-third of respondents (37.9%) agreed or strongly agreed that if they drove high, they would probably not get caught."

Drug Recognition Experts can help educate your community about these dangers and help parents and others spread the word to current drivers.

Description:

With so much discussion on bump stocks and ghost guns in the media, there may be questions about how proposed changes to the National Firearms Act may affect the work of local law enforcement, gun dealers (FFL) and the enforcement tools addressing violent crime. In this presentation, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) will offer insight into the legal limits of bump stocks and ghost guns. In addition, will provide strategies how law enforcement and FFLs can better work together. Furthermore, presenters will discuss tactics and strategies to work with FFL to address the prevalence of straw purchasers.

Description:

It was a sunny afternoon culminating a busy Black Friday weekend at one of the busiest malls in North Texas. An individual who was determined to force a police officer to shoot him during a "suicide by cop" scenario entered the crowded mall with a fake handgun.

During a retail theft, the suspect pointed his fake gun at a uniformed officer who returned fire striking the suspect. Within a few minutes, the unfolding scene became national news as shoppers were evacuated and panic rang out inside the mall of rumors of an active shooter.

This presentation will focus on the organizational response and how the department corrected the false narrative through a proactive social media push and news release.

South Dakota Highway Patrol victim/witness specialists (VWS) work within the Crash Assistance Program (Est. 2015) guide and assist families during the devastating time following fatal and life-threatening automobile crashes whether or not charges are filed, serve victims and secondary victims of crime throughout the criminal process to include law enforcement as crime victims assaulted in the line of duty.

Our work with the families assists state troopers who often want to give the families more of their time, but are tasked heavily with the investigation process. We also know how state troopers investigate these crashes and we are able to relay information as necessary in a kind and compassionate way to the families affected.

Numerous studies conducted in the 1990's and early 2000's revealed that professionals – including psychologists and police investigators – accurately detected deception during interviews at levels barely exceeding chance. To make matters worse, a majority of these professional lie catchers believed that they possessed higher levels of accuracy than the lay public, a claim unwarranted given their lackluster performance in settings in which the ground truth could be determined. In response to these surprising findings, recent research has found new hope: Professional lie catchers can achieve much better rates of accurately classifying truth tellers and liars if they: (1) are trained to disregard myths about signs of deception and truth-tellin

Description:
At the state and local level, frameworks for public health and public safety collaboration are expanding. Several states have developed drug monitoring initiatives and overdose fatality review teams while New York City has developed the RxStat initiative. These efforts integrate various public safety and public health data sets to include drug overdose deaths, non-fatal overdoses, naloxone administrations, prescriber data, drug arrests, drug seizures, laboratory results, etc. The analysis of these data sets enables the creation of initiatives that protect public safety and health. This session will explore models of public health and public safety partnerships and discuss the critical elements needed to sustain these partnerships.

Police shooting or use of deadly force is one of the most controversial topics in policing. Whether used in their legal limits or in excessive forms, police shootings have enormous influence and changing power not only on individuals but also on law enforcement agencies and communities. The influence of a police shooting on other police officers who have not used deadly force has been left relatively understudied. This presentation will focus on the effects of shooting not on the police officer involved shooting but other police officers in the same department. The presentation will share the result of a case study.

Description:

There is no question, heart attack is one of the most significant killers of law enforcement officers. We have known for years that at ages 55 to 59, a civilian has a chance of dying from a heart attack of around 1.5%, while a police officer has the probability of dying from a heart attack in that same age range of around 56%. We are also seeing the development of non-fatal heart attacks much more frequently and younger in men and women in law enforcement. Fortunately, over the last several years, the ability to detect the early stages of heart disease has advanced tremendously.

By detecting coronary disease early, countless lives are saved and tax-payer dollar expenditures are substantially reduced.

Description:

Law enforcement is in the midst of a paradigm shift, as the generation known as the Z Generation, born between 1995 and 2010, will graduate high school and college and prepare to enter the ranks of sworn officers. The Z Generation have had early and frequent exposure to technology, are the first real global generation, and have grown up in an uncertain and complex environment, marked by issues of violence and a volatile economy, all factors which shape their viewpoint about employment.

This presentation will examine how the Z Generation's expectations and style of communication can impact your agency, best practices in training the "Z's," and how to effectively motivate the "Z's" to engage and form partnerships with your community.

Understanding the 'Who'- The Role of Technology in Offender-Based Policing - Presented by Numerica Corporation

2:00 PM - 2:45 PM

4045

Type:

Educational Session

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

Booth #2845

Presenter(s):

Brian Strock

Numerica Corporation - Manager-Public Safety

Description:

Evolving research has shown the effectiveness of offender-based policing strategies, which posits that a relatively small number of offenders are responsible for a disproportionately large amount of crime in a particular jurisdiction. In order to deploy deterrence tactics, this small subset of offenders must first be identified. While the identity of some prolific offenders may be readily apparent, it is often difficult to sift through the overwhelming amount of data coming from an agency's records management system to identify all top offenders. Further, it can be an even greater task to account for the particular offense types of interest, dynamically reorder the list of offenders (correcting for new events and time decay), and include criminal history for offenders with involvements outside of an agency's jurisdiction. Utilizing a firm understanding of the data, and leveraging modern technology, the law enforcement agency can better understand the most prolific offenders in their jurisdiction, the evolution of their criminal involvements, and how to best operationalize technology that supports offender-based policing strategies.

Description:

Many government organizations throughout the world utilize volunteers to enhance services, and volunteers have been used in law enforcement and policing agencies for a variety of functions. Local governments in many countries have recognized the immense value that volunteers can provide, expanding the ability of agencies to be effective in meeting public demands for services. However, police volunteers may have different roles, authority, and responsibilities depending on the policing agency and jurisdiction, and are a vastly understudied area of the criminal justice system. This presentation examines the utilization of volunteer reserves, auxiliaries, special constables, and special deputies with sworn/warranted policing powers, but also reviews the use of volunteers who serve in support roles for the police with varying responsibilities and authority. This may include search and rescue teams, clerical or administrative volunteers, or volunteers for youth programs. Volunteers may have certain outside skills, such as aircraft pilots or cyber intelligence, that make them priceless commodities for policing agencies. Or, they may just have spare time to donate, such as front-desk volunteers, and a willingness to learn. The presentation and panel will review volunteerism in policing from a global perspective, but particularly in the United States, the United Kingdom, and Taiwan. The speakers will examine the similarities and differences in volunteers in policing in countries with a nationalized/centralized policing system as compared to the decentralized system of the United States. Training, demographics, leadership and professionalism, and the pitfalls and liabilities of volunteer programs within policing will also be discussed.

Because EMS will not respond into such direct threat situations for prolonged periods until the scene is deemed 'safe', conventional EMS victim care will not be available during threat mitigation. The challenge to the law enforcement officer (LEO) in these situations cannot be overstated. The LEO has a dual role of threat mitigation, and may be the only provider of emergency medical care for fellow officers or victims with life-threatening injuries. Law enforcement is behind the curve. The private sector is often first to implement innovative cyber security process and technology. In many ways, the healthcare and pharmaceutical domains represent enticing targets to criminals. Research suggests that medical records are more valuable to hackers than any other type of data. According to PhishLabs, a cyber protection company, stolen health records are worth 20 times more than stolen credit cards. A Cisco report identifies pharma as among the top three verticals having high threat perception. This dynamic workshop will feature a cyber expert from the health and pharma sectors, with the CIO from a big city police department; to explore how industry experience can transform cyber in policing.

Description:

While all 50 states and the District of Columbia have enacted anti-trafficking laws, few state agencies have developed specific child sex trafficking policies or require specialized training to help professionals across sectors to identify and respond to the complex needs of child sex trafficking survivors. This workshop provides an opportunity for law enforcement executives to learn about key anti-trafficking laws as well as local efforts to help front line officers better identify, investigate and respond to child sex trafficking victims. This session will highlight how federal, state, and local agencies are addressing the needs of child sex trafficking victims through advocacy partnerships and innovative policies and practices.

Description:

Healthy communities require healthy officers. Police executives understand the importance of officer safety and wellness, but officer engagement with those practices and policies can be a challenging hurdle. There is little benefit gained from physical, mental, and occupational wellness programs if there is no buy-in. This workshop will present best practices for effective messaging, marketing, and staff engagement that agencies can use to increase buy-in for their safety and wellness initiatives. Leading experts from law enforcement physical fitness, resiliency, and stress reduction fields will discuss resources, strategies, and solutions to support individual officer buy-in and an agency-wide culture of officer wellness.

Description:

While most policing agencies in the United States employ proactive policing strategies, the evidence as to their effectiveness is mixed and inconclusive. This panel will consider and discuss proactive policing strategies - such as community policing, problem-oriented policing, place-based or hot spot policing, and person-focused strategies - from a practical and an academic perspective to provide attendees knowledge that they can use to apply those strategies to best effect in their jurisdictions. Participants will discuss their hands-on experiences with and their tacit knowledge on the effectiveness of these strategies. A noted researcher will reflect on how those experiences relate to the current body of research in this area.

This team follows up with individuals who have recently experienced an opioid overdose and tries to link them with treatment. The unique component of this project is the potential for immediate treatment. The Maryhaven Addiction and Stabilization Center provides a real-time location for detox and inpatient treatment. By implementing this team concept there has been the added incentive of learning that there are other agencies that can assist one another and that we can work together to achieve the common goal of assisting these individuals and their families in a time of need.

Description:

There has been significant public scrutiny of the use-of-force by police and yet very little has changed in the delivery of police defensive and control tactics training. Many of these recruit and in-service programs in North America are under-resourced, outdated in curriculum design, and lack a research basis for what is needed by officers on the street. We conducted empirical analyses of training at three large regional police academies in three time zones within the United States of America. We objectively examined the performance and learning of three classes, across three representative training approaches to defensive and control tactics. We will demonstrate the impact of performance feedback on instructor behavior and cadet performance during initial training, throughout the academies, and after academy graduation. We will provide recommendations for the promotion of long term learning, based on a thorough review of the scientific literature and translated into simplified terms. In Canada, the Vancouver Police Department has analyzed data from officer reports on use-of-force since 2013 and incorporated the findings to identify gaps in use-of-force training, has overhauled empty hand training, and incorporated Police Judo training to better serve officers on the street. Participants will hear from Dr. John O'Neill on his ground breaking research into Defensive Tactics Training at the Academy level, and Sgt. Toby Hinton, a Force Options Trainer from Vancouver Police Department, on how data is being mined to overhaul physical skills training.

Officer safety and wellness is a top priority for law enforcement agencies, but questions can arise as to what training content and delivery formats are most beneficial for officers. This workshop will highlight common themes identified in the Law Enforcement Officer (LEO) Near Miss database and feature two chiefs whose agencies have implemented LEO Near Miss reporting agency-wide. The chiefs will discuss their experiences, the insights they have gathered, the training and policy changes they are making based on the data, and how themes emerging from LEO Near Miss relate to results of a nationally representative survey of 650 law enforcement agencies, conducted as part of the BJA VALOR Initiative, on current risks, needs, and trainings.

Description:

Biases can be a major obstacle in a police department's effort to seek the best possible results in all aspects of its work. The culture and climate within a police department can either reinforce or challenge these biases. This workshop will utilize the inter-active training model developed by the University of New Hampshire's Power Play to specifically examine how cases of explicit and implicate bias impact all aspects of a department's work. Incorporating research in bias awareness and intervention, Power Play will present scenarios, performed by professional actors, that will target these issues as they relate police work. The session will offer a laboratory where participants can better understand how these biases manifest and to experiment with strategies that will lead to better outcomes in the field, through improving a department's culture and climate.

Description:

The frequent use of arrest for some misdemeanor offenses has recently generated significant public scrutiny, and overloaded local criminal justice systems. While there are critical implications for police legitimacy and perceptions of community safety based on this additional public scrutiny, officers too have become increasingly frustrated with the revolving door aspect of the criminal justice system. Recent research and policy has focused on examining the availability of effective alternatives to arrest, including police-led diversion programs. Police-led diversion offers a variety of models to provide alternatives to arrest, including access to treatment for offenders affected by substance use and/or mental health disorders. Law enforcement agencies engaging in these initiatives must be mindful of how to build sustainable programs that are successfully addressing the needs of the community, while also avoiding potential unintended consequences. This panel discussion provides opportunities to learn from police executives who are currently implementing various approaches, and gather insight from researcher and philanthropic partners dedicated to enhancing the development and sustainability of alternatives to arrest.

Leadership is the challenge of influencing hearts and minds by enhancing our people's engagement, productivity, creativity, passion and commitment.

These are not intellectual undertakings, these are heart felt and heart born emotions that are the source of our drive, effort and grit. When these drives are not healthy and positive they also are the source of cynicism, apathy and disengagement.

Policing, like leadership, is not an intellectual exercise. It is an exercise, practice and craft that is born in the heart – born in the spirit of service, honor and nobility. A deep sense of purpose is born in the heart and not the head.

This workshop will inspire, inform, educate and challenge our leaders to lead with courage, empathy, and wisdom

Mass casualty events often occur in public places and involve victims with no association to an organization or even each other. Victims needing information and support may include the families of the deceased and severely injured, those physically injured, and individuals who were present and suffer emotional injury. While a number of agencies and organizations may respond to an act of mass violence, there are particular points of intersection between law enforcement and victims/families. Description:

Before an officer approaches a car in a traffic stop or they knock on a front door, they should know what is behind those doors. They need to know quickly whether they have happened upon a stolen car, or if the person on the other side has a history of fighting with police or firearm violations. Officers need the information pushed to them in a matter of seconds to be able to do their jobs well and stay safe. The data they need exists, but the challenge for most police agencies is to provide it to them quickly and in a way that is helpful to the officer and not a distraction. Come hear from agencies that now have the technology and mobile data solution to put these amazing resources in the hands of their officers.

Description:

Clinical trials of 3,4-methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA) as a tool to assist psychotherapy for the treatment of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) to law enforcement. Preliminary studies have shown that MDMA in conjunction with psychotherapy can help cops overcome PTSD, and possibly other disorders as well. MDMA is known for increasing feelings of trust and compassion towards others, which could make an ideal adjunct to psychotherapy for PTSD. We are studying whether MDMA-assisted psychotherapy can help heal the psychological and emotional damage caused by sexual assault, war, violent crime, and other traumas.

Description:

With the ongoing professionalization of law enforcement public communications, there is a growing trend where some agencies are looking to hire civilian professionals as their lead Public Information Officer. This course, presented by speakers from two medium-sized agencies in Silicon Valley who use a civilian PIO model, is designed for leaders of any agency considering a switch to the civilian model. The course focuses on best practices in hiring, including how to incorporate a myriad of options in the testing process to find someone with the appropriate diverse skill set. The course also focuses on how to successfully integrate a civilian into an otherwise sworn workforce, building trust and reducing friction along the way.

Presenter(s):

Mike Kovaleff

Palm Springs Police Department - Captain

Bryan Reyes

Palm Springs Police Department - Chief

Description:

On October 8, 2016, Palm Springs (California) Police Officers Jose Vega and Lesley Zerebny were shot and killed in an ambush attack while handling a domestic disturbance call. Vega, 63 years old, was weeks away from retirement. Zerebny, 27 years old, had just returned from maternity leave. The presentation addresses the setting, the incident, and the aftermath. The setting provides an overview of the department (93 sworn) and the history of community outreach. The incident provides details of the incident, decision making at the scene, and events outside of the scene. The aftermath addresses the lessons learned, the importance of community outreach, and what to expect if a critical incident of this magnitude happens to a small agency.

Description:

The presentation will describe and discuss the following:

1. Describe the scope and scale of cybercrimes and the difficulty law enforcement has in capturing a growing crime type that has no borders.
2. Recap some Best Practices that have been learned and how the traditional local crime landscape has evolved.
3. Discuss the transition from traditional street crime to cyber enabled fraud, by formerly traditional street gangs.
4. Discuss techniques used by today's criminals to fraudulently obtain goods, and how cyber-enabled crimes such as forged credit card fraud and forged debit card fraud (ie: ATM Skimming) affect the NYC Crime Landscape.
5. Discuss how we've changed our approach and adapted to this new cyber-enabled crime reality.

The National Use-of-Force (UoF) Data Collection and the National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS) Transition are prongs of Crime Data Modernization, an FBI Initiative to improve the nation's Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) crime statistics for reliability, accuracy, accessibility, and timeliness, and to expand the depth and breadth of data collected. The National UoF Data Collection and reporting of UoF data will include any UoF which results in the death or serious bodily injury of a person, as well as when a law enforcement officer discharges a firearm at or in the direction of a person. Members of the National UoF Data Collection Task Force will serve as panelists and focus on themes of leadership, transparency, consistency, purpose, and accountability as they relate to this data collection. An update will be provided to explain how agencies can participate in the collection.

Description:

Connecting siloed technologies continues to be a growing challenge facing law enforcement agencies across the nation. With more data available to agencies than ever before, how do you ensure it's all connected, accurate and available when you need it most?

Learn how first responders from agencies across the nation are better fighting crime in their cities by leveraging a fully integrated end-to-end software suite. Discover how you can utilize technology as a time and resource saver so that your officers can instead spend more time on patrol keeping the communities they serve safe.

Attend the session and receive actionable guidance from police departments serving some of the most populated cities in the country. From implementing real-time-crime centers to body-worn camera programs, these agencies will explain how integrating their disparate technology systems has positively impacted community trust, political success, and training policies.

Description:

Improved victim services in policing can lead to stronger development and coordination of programs to increase public safety and create lasting systems of care for crime victims and the overall community. The integration of victim-focused practices can strengthen crisis response, reduce the impact of trauma, increase participation, and improve outcomes- particularly in sexual violence, intimate partner violence, and stalking cases-by connecting victims, witnesses, and survivors with support resources and information.

Similarly, engaging survivors and advocates for victims of sexual violence, intimate partner violence, and stalking in the development and review of agency policies, procedures, training programs, and other organizational aspects can enhance the effectiveness of the department's future services to the community. This works to the benefit of not only crime victims, but also the success of law enforcement's mission to safeguard its community, hold offenders accountable, and prevent future crime. Increasing the inclusion of survivor/advocate partners in these processes also sends the message that the agency is committed to being transparent, responsive, and collaborative with its community.

Workplace studies have shown healthy employees are more productive, use less sick time, have improved morale and are more positive about their employer. Studies also show one in three police officers may experience personal or professional challenges during their career and yet many agencies have no policy directing officers and supervisors on appropriate response procedure. Additionally, many agencies have no understanding of insurance or available peer or clinical resources.

Description:

The use of sUAS to support police operations has become widely accepted for such things as traffic crash reconstruction, SAR and disaster operations. sUAS provide a real-time aerial perspective for incident commanders that facilitates effective decision making and a more efficient way to gather forensic evidence.

There has been little practical experience with sUAS due to regulatory and privacy concerns. Regulations are now in place and strategies to address privacy.

The panel has extensive international experience and will speak to the technology and its uses around the world. They will also provide a global perspective on cultural aspects of the use of drones.

The new revised IACP sUAS Model Policy will be discussed.

Description:

As schools, public venues, and local law enforcement agencies face rising violence, they look for tools to aid in incident response. The panel members have implemented initiatives to address the communications aspects of active shooter responses. A case study from Seminole County where 65 schools benefit from interoperable communication with law enforcement will be shared. Lessons learned from the Pulse nightclub response provide insight regarding interoperability in Orlando. Arriving on-scene with good real-time situational awareness ensures that officers are responding optimally. They are safer. Teachers with panic buttons are safer when first responders arrive fully informed because they have audio from the scene.

Description:

The population of the United States is aging. Frequently, responding officers have misconceptions about older adults such as most older adults have dementia, bruise easily, fall often, develop pressure ulcers, and have osteoporosis. These misconceptions often prevent serious investigations into most deaths of adults over the age of 65.

If age and pre-existing conditions are the only considerations when investigating elder deaths, it is quite likely foul play is being overlooked. Until responding officers recognize abuse, neglect & exploitation of at-risk adults, it will continue to remain hidden in plain sight. This presentation will provide an overview of red flags for officers to look for when called to the death of elderly adults.

Self-driving cars flying point to point. Less-lethal weapons outperforming lethal weapons. Deadly viruses printed in a basement using DNA-printing technology. While these ideas may sound crazy, they could soon become a reality. Join Axon CEO Rick Smith to discuss the most controversial technology advancements coming our way, their implications for public safety, and what law enforcement agencies can do to prepare for the future. With both technology and the nature of crimes changing at an exponential rate, law enforcement agencies will need to adapt to serve their communities. This session will draw from recent studies and reports to provide attendees with a view of where public safety and the threats they face could be in the next decade.

The Transformational Trainer: Police Learning in an Era of Distraction

3:00 PM - 4:00 PM

Session No:

4021

Type:

Location:

Orange County Convention Center - West Building

Room:

Presenter(s):

Randy Larcher

New Mexico State Police - Captain

John Bostain

Command Presence Training Associates - Owner

Jesse Williams

New Mexico State Police - Captain

Description:

In this era of constant distraction, police leaders must develop innovative practices to assure their officers are learning concepts in a manner that will positively affect behavior. The public demands that police leaders provide a professionally-trained police force. Academy managers are ultimately responsible for the quality of training their instructors provide. Regardless of topic, how training is delivered will have the most impact on learning and retention. The heart of all training is the instructor. Merely reading PowerPoint slides is not the answer!

John Bostain explores evidence-based methods of designing and delivering training to make it "stick". He will dispel common myths about adult learning and examine feedback models that enhance student performance.

Jesse Williams and Randy Larcher will discuss ways police instructors can utilize a variety of teaching methods (storytelling, compelling visual aids, and learner-centered activities) to leverage a higher-quality learning experience that has application outside of the classroom.

Description:

What goes up must come down. The cycle of hypervigilance often interrupts an officer's ability to connect with partners, spouse, or other loved ones causing miscommunication, misunderstanding, arguments, loneliness, and lack of intimacy. While there must be accommodation for the cycle and the recovery of the officer, it does not mean that relationships need to take a hit. In this 90 minutes, we will explore the cycle of hypervigilance, the impact of the cycle on the officer, spouse and relationship, and research-based interventions of Drs. John and Julie Gottman, Dr. Brené Brown, and others to stay intimately connected and thrive. Walk out of this session with greater understanding and tools to make a difference.

Thirty-eight states, however, do not mandate that their academies provide instruction on hate crimes and in seven other states, recruits are not required to learn about hate crimes at all. Participants in this Lab will learn how to respond effectively to a bias incident to ensure the safety of the targeted minority community and to build trust between communities and law enforcement. This Lab will provide needed bias crime training to officers and leaders who will develop the skills necessary to identify a hate crime, accurately report it, positively engage with victims, and develop a solid case for prosecution.

Getting and keeping good people is critical to the effectiveness of all law enforcement agencies. In too many regions around the United States, the law enforcement applicant pool is very small and competitive. So it's not surprising that many police executives list recruitment and retention as one of their top challenges. We are desperately in need of strategies that expand recruitment without lowering hiring standards. This session will explore why agency recruitment and retention is not just an HR responsibility, but rather, requires the involvement of all members of the agency. Attendees will learn key steps in the recruitment lifecycle that can help leaders attract the right candidates and effectively evaluate their progress.

Description:

The standard training response to Active Shooter incidents has been and still is overwhelming small unit tactics; 2 to 4 person formations. Unfortunately, with 48% of Law Enforcement agencies in the US being comprised of 10 or fewer sworn personnel, how will you field 4 officers to handle this tactic? And what of the first officer on scene, is he / she supposed to sit outside and wait while carnage is taking place inside? What of the SRO or the officer who just by chance was already on scene, are they supposed to wait in a secure area until help arrives.....for them? Our profession has to accept that those tactics aren't applicable. A bold step forward must be taken. And that bold step has to be SOLO Engagement Tactics.

These incidents inherently have a greater potential for miscommunication and erratic behavior, which can be exacerbated by a traditional law enforcement response. This session provides an overview of a strategic disengagement policy employed by the one of the most active SWAT teams in the United States. The discussion will cover the basis for the policy, case examples of its absence and use, and tips for best practices. Description:

Law enforcement agencies (LEAs) often encounter two acute public health crisis scenarios—opioid overdoses (ODs) and mental health emergencies. Many departments are responding to both by using pre-arrest diversion (PAD) approaches that can lead to treatment for individuals affected by substance use disorders (SUDs) and/or mental illness, and improve public safety outcomes. For SUDs, after administering Naloxone, how can first responders link victims to treatment? When using a CIT, co-responder, or other model to defuse crisis situations, how can LEAs ensure individuals are connected to treatment and medications? Panelists will provide information on law enforcement strategies that include linkages to treatment following critical incidents.

Description:Curtailing the Fentanyl Scourge: A Three Pillared Solution

There has been a surge in Opioid availability in the US since the early 1990's. A perfect storm of a legitimate misperception of the risks of certain prescribed pharmaceuticals, intentional abuse of certain state-based regulations on opioid prescribing, and increasing strength levels, coupled with an innovative distribution strategy, for illicit heroin, left the nation in a precarious situation as we entered the second decade of the 21st century.

As the nation was dealing with a massive increase in the number of addicted people, synthetic drugs were being synthesized which could meet this demand, while offering several significant "business" advantages over naturally produced drug products. These drugs are too strong to be mixed to an adequate homogeneity by illegal providers. As a result, they are causing a sudden and dramatic increase in drug death, as well as representing a significant threat to first-responders. The "business" advantages of synthetic fentanyl are so great in fact, we can legitimately ask the rhetorical question, "why sell any natural heroin?"

This presentation will answer that question; the answer clearly suggests that fentanyl will continue to expand as a share of the market, as will the death rate, not merely the number of opioid deaths. A "three-pillar" solution is suggested, with two of the pillars already in process. As one of the pillars is a street-level, safe detection device, a review of the state-of-the-art in detection technology will be included.

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration - Highway Safety Specialist

Description:

Technology is currently available that can mitigate the effect of distraction as well as external risk factors for law enforcement officers. The presentation will offer an overview of automated driving and safety systems currently available that have the potential to reduce serious injuries and line of duty deaths resulting from driving-related incidents, as well as provide insight into risk factors that can affect the safety of first responders.

Description:

As the incidents of active violence continue to occur at our educational institutions across the country, the City of Sturgis and Sturgis Public Schools have joined forces and taken measures to be proactive and at the forefront of active shooter/active aggressor trainings. They have developed and implemented a program that includes response training to disarm and attack an active aggressor and has educated the entire district on these techniques. This unique training was developed using parts of various trainings including "run, hide, fight", ground fighting, rape prevention, and others. The thought process was that by using simple techniques, improvised weapons, etc., the more likely that the skills learned would be retained and utilized.

What happens when you scientifically research your training curriculum? The Federal Law Enforcement Training Centers (FLETC) has been doing just that for the past few years. The FLETC has been working closely to ask tough questions about traditional law enforcement driver training. This presentation will present original research designed by FLETC to analyze different methodologies for teaching line of travel training and the learning transfer of these concepts in emergency vehicle operation courses. We will also discuss where this collaboration is leading FLETC's thinking about the future of training police drivers, particularly in relation to emphasizing hazard perception skills along with traditional car control skills.

Description:

Today's public safety environment is more challenging than ever, as communities are expecting the highest level of transparency, responsiveness and service. Those challenges extend to PIOs and public affairs personnel, who are expected to consistently handle calls, e-mails, tweets, posts and inquiries of different scales at all hours of the day and night in both critical incidents and daily "routine" situations. Frenetic workdays, late nights, and perpetually growing to-do lists are par for the course and often can lead to burnout. How can departments best support these increasingly important employees and prevent turnover, and what can persons in these positions do to best position themselves for short and long-term balance.

Description:

The use of civilian personnel in law enforcement has evolved over the last few decades; where formerly most civilians would occupy administrative positions, now they work in highly skilled investigative, technical, and even executive roles among the top echelons of the largest police departments in the U.S. Non-sworn personnel are increasingly being turned to as experts and are surpassing standards previously set by their sworn counterparts. This presentation will describe in detail how to maximize the advantages and address the potential pitfalls of civilianization and how to effectively train and incorporate non-sworn personnel into the ranks of law enforcement agencies of any size.

The greatest threat to the lives of the men and women in uniform is themselves. More officers die by suicide, than are killed by felonious assaults or killed in vehicular accidents combined. How many more lives must be lost before agencies and administrators take this threat seriously? How many more officers will suffer in silence without appropriate resources? This secret has been allowed to hide for far too long. The silence is deafening and denial disheartening. To remain silent any longer is to purposefully deny the threat lurking in your agency. This panel discussion will address officer mental health, while providing practical solutions to assist agencies in reducing the number of officers who die by suicide each year.

Hurricanes continue to sweep a path of destruction across Florida and other surrounding states.

Understanding how your agency can leverage real-time intelligence and communications is crucial to preparing for state-wide disasters. Listen as communication managers and real-time crime center analyst from agencies across the U.S. discuss multiple levels of preparation and coordination with partner agencies and medical resources that go into an effective hurricane response.

Pre-staging support, repair personnel, and access to real-time information, video, and sensors all played a role in the success of those responding to natural disasters. Hear how lives are saved as a result of redundant P25 communication systems and real-time actionable intelligence, that allow emergency personnel to effectively communicate and coordinate response before and immediately after the hurricane made landfall.

The Dallas Police Depart (DPD) & FLETC train federal, local & international LE professionals using techniques developed & founded on research. To bridge the gap between theory, classroom resources, & app techniques, the DPD replaced role playing exercises with interrogation of prisoners awaiting adjudication. This innovative approach, exposed students to real interrogations with actual suspects at the end of two days of training. The concept is successful, & positive results are repeated adding validity to the prog. Many LE agencies benefit from this new idea, & training can be adapted to any agency with some planning & little expense

It will address the growing challenge of the competing narratives, through media and social media, that give rise to increasing community tensions. The workshop will detail how community policing can provide chiefs with a force multiplier to improve response, create resiliency, and increase public and officer safety. The workshop will also demonstrate how to build bridges by giving voice to community grievances and concerns while supporting the public safety and criminal activity concerns of police agencies. Law enforcement and subject matter experts will provide examples that can be utilized by any agency.

Over the last four years, FPD has formed a strong relationship with the North Carolina Harm Reduction Coalition (NCHRC). This relationship has resulted in multiple programs being established. These include FPD's Naloxone program which has resulted in over 120 overdose reversals. The department has also partnered with NCHRC and other community stakeholders to establish the Law Enforcement Assisted Diversion Program (LEAD) which diverts drug users away from the criminal justice system and into wrap-around treatment services. Finally, FPD supports NCHRC's Syringe Exchange Program (SEP).

Description:

Law enforcement public information officers are always willing to help each other out - but are we doing that in the most impactful or effective ways, especially in the crucial first minutes and hours after a crisis or major event? Using lessons learned from the Pulse mass shooting in July 2016, and the line of duty deaths of four law enforcement officers in 2017, PIOs from the Orlando Police Department, Orange County Sheriff's Office and Kissimmee Police have developed action plans for disciplined and coordinated messaging. Many agencies have just one PIO, and we have learned that no one person can handle all the moving parts in a major event, but we can team up and lend much needed expertise and help when our PIO partners need it most.

Policia Militar do Estado de Sao Paulo - Lieutenant Colonel

Description:

This is a case study of how the Sao Paulo Military Police (PMESP) have incorporated a data driven process to target risk factors associated with traffic fatalities. Among these are impaired driving, speeding, motorcycle helmets, and seatbelts. The PMESP has developed partnerships with other stakeholders in Sao Paulo to consolidate traffic crash data from disparate sources, prioritize hazard areas, and tailor multi-agency response to enforce traffic laws and educate the public. Their combined efforts continue to yield positive results as traffic fatalities are decreasing in city that had been ranked in the top ten of highest traffic fatality rates in the world.

Immigration and Customs Enforcement - Deputy Attache for Removal (DAR)

Description:

Presentation Description:

This presentation will provide recipients with an understanding and awareness of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) Enforcement and Removal Operation's (ERO) SAFE program that, while currently operational in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras; has demonstrated operational success and worldwide adaptability potential.

ICE will briefly overview the removal process and how aliens are physically removed from the U.S. In doing so, ICE will highlight 1) that removals, particularly those of fugitive criminal aliens, significantly contribute to safeguarding jurisdictions by removing criminals from the community; and 2) the importance of obtaining identity documents for removal purposes.

Description:

The NIBRS is one prong of Crime Data Modernization, an FBI initiative to improve the nation's Uniform Crime Reporting crime statistics for reliability, accuracy, accessibility, and timeliness, and to expand the depth and breadth of data collected. The FBI will provide an update on the transition of local, state, tribal, and federal law enforcement agencies from the Summary Reporting System of crime data to the more detailed NIBRS. An overall update on the states and the NCS-X agencies that received funding since fiscal year 2015 and the status of the final grants that will be awarded by December 2018 will be provided by the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

Description:

How confident are you when you speak? Do butterflies attack your stomach whenever you speak before an audience? Can you confidently express your thoughts and ideas or do you get nervous and clam up? Do you dread speaking in public? Do not let your fear of public speaking prevent you from getting ahead personally and professionally? Now you can learn to speak with confidence and passion. Who are the leaders in your community, your company and your country? Those who can express themselves and make you buy into their ideas. Speakers are leaders. If you want to have any influence over your fellow countrymen, you must learn to speak in public.

Jack Van Steenburg

Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA) - Chief Safety Officer and Assistant Administrator

Description:

In 2016, there were 37,461 lives lost on the roadways. Fatalities involving large trucks and buses increased five percent in 2016 from 2015. Many of these large truck and bus crashes are preventable, as well as their residual effects on society; for example, economic impacts, secondary crashes, loss of family members, traffic congestion, and lost first responder time due to injuries at crash scenes. Traffic incident management for large trucks and buses should be expanded to specifically address situations commonly found on the millions of miles of rural roads in the U.S. The purpose of this forum is to educate and inform rural law enforcement agencies and allied partners of the public health and safety benefits of traffic incident management.

Description:

The implementation of a robust quality assurance program is essential to ensure that quality forensic science services are provided to support effective investigations, enable successful prosecutions (particularly for violent crimes and drug crimes), and increase public trust in police activities. This panel will present key aspects of forensic quality management systems and present approaches to institutionalize international standards and best practices for the collection, preservation, and analysis of forensic evidence. Representatives from Law Enforcement Forensic Units discuss quality-management system implementation strategies and provide an overview of forensic accreditation requirements and resources.
